Jet Setting for the Most Gospel Ready

Locked and Loaded

Poland is 90% Catholic. But that doesn't mean folk know Jesus, really. However, it does mean unbelievable freedom for the Treasure Hunt. In the past we even saw teachers use Xerox copies in public schools.

The real rub is if we can get Catholic bishops to back it and it would be nice if Evangelicals opened to it too (Slavic countries are conservative and comix get a bad rap with adults...adults but not kids).

Since we had the Treasure Hunt; materials, videos, website, all ready in Polish, we figured we better give it a whirl. The next six months is a test. Our partner in this is Szaron publishing (pic) and we got free samples to many ministries like Cru and YWAM...and then we had to leave...for Albania.

Pocket-Monster to Pocket-Manga

Perhaps you are aware that the biggest entertainment franchise in the world is Pokemon?

That's right, thanks to anime and gaming Pokemon (short in Japanese for Pocket Monster) is king. Kids around the world, everywhere we have been, even slums of remote third world countries seem to know Pokemon and its cute main character, Pikachu.

Now check out the very first recipient of the Polish version (pictured right) in small town southern Poland. He's wearing his Pikachu cap. Love the cool shades too. Totally ready to rock and roll for Jesus!

We would love to see thousands of Polish kids with the same pose. Let's pray!

Reaching the Most Reachable of the Most Unreached!

Islamic Gateway to Europe...Again

Tens of thousands of kids in Albania have gotten the Treasure Hunt—it was our first “Islamic nation” effort. Now we are considering the next step. Meanwhile, the Grand Mosque has opened in the capital, Tirana, at a cost of 30 million euros. But we have seen Muslim kids who came to Christ with the Treasure Hunt now leading churches!

Years ago in Albania we printed thousands of mangas for Afghans during the disastrous pull out. This trip we picked up thousands of leftovers because they are useable also for Iran— everything is prepped if Iran opens—we are actually way ahead of the game!

Old Churches and Friendly Cats

Honestly, with all that's going on our fatigue has grown. It was time for a break. Borrowing a car in Albania we drove to the remote country, Montenegro. The selling point of the medieval town was “old churches and friendly cats” and it sounded like a great place to lay low, especially after stressful driving all over Poland and mega-stressful driving in Albania. The quiet bay, purring cats, and sunsets worked their magic...and it was time for another flight.

Back to Tokyo

Getting back to Tokyo the usual crush awaited! A team of 78 short term workers from California—never seen such a big team but helping them do outreach was a privilege. This is, after all, the second largest unreached place on earth...We appreciate you and all your prayers!
